

Making a complaint about a teacher

INFORMATION SHEET

Regulating the teaching profession

The Queensland College of Teachers (the QCT) is established under the Education (Queensland College of Teachers) Act 2005 (the Act) as the agency responsible for the regulation of the teaching profession in Queensland. The Act gives the QCT the power to receive and investigate complaints against teachers where a ground for disciplinary action exists. The grounds for disciplinary action are at section 92. A complaint must be in writing and contain particulars of the allegation. Section 88 of the Act allows the QCT to ask the complainant to provide further information or to verify the complaint by statutory declaration.

First raise your complaint with the teacher's employer

You should make your complaint first to the Principal, governing body of the school (such as a Board or Council), or to the employing authority that employs the teacher (such as the Department of Education and Training). If you believe a ground for disciplinary action exists against the teacher in respect to their professional registration following the outcome of your complaint you can lodge a complaint with the QCT.

It may not be possible for a complaint to first be raised with the teacher's employer (for example, if the teacher is no longer working at the school). In these circumstances you should advise the QCT why your complaint was not referred to the teacher's employer.

Information you need to provide

It is important that you clearly outline in your complaint the circumstances that led to your complaint arising, dates or timeframes as to when events occurred, and the names and contact details of any witnesses.

If you wish to complain about more than one teacher, please complete one Complaint Form for each teacher. Copies of the complaint and any documents you provide to the QCT may be given to the teacher who is the subject of the complaint. You do not have to use the Complaint Form in order to lodge a complaint. If you wish, you can submit your complaint in a letter detailing the allegations (the Complaint Form should be used as a guide to ensure you include all relevant information).

You may be required to provide further information about your complaint and to sign a statutory declaration about the information that you provide to the QCT. If the matter proceeds to investigation or is considered by a practice and conduct body you and other witnesses to the matter may be required to give statements and be cross-examined on the evidence provided.

What the QCT does not deal with

The QCT is not able to consider complaints in every circumstance, for example:

- Administrative matters (e.g. not providing report cards or feedback about a student's development; issues about school uniforms, or application of a policy, including curriculum) – these issues should be directed to the school or employing authority.
- Employee performance (e.g. allegations about a teacher's performance and/or management) – these matters should be directed to the school or employing authority.
- Family Court and child safety matters between a teacher and his/her children – in this circumstance independent legal advice should be sought and child safety concerns reported to a relevant authority such as the Queensland Police Service and the Department of Child Safety.
- Criminal activity – these allegations should be directed to the Queensland Police Service.
- Official misconduct (e.g. conduct that could, if proved, be a criminal offence; or a disciplinary breach, providing reasonable grounds for terminating the person's services, if the person is or was a public servant) – these matters should be referred in the first instance to the Crime and Corruption Commission¹.
